This topic generated a lot of discussion about why programs, resources, etc... come and go. • Not receiving any information as to why programs end is frustrating. • Before programs come into existence an extensive amount of preparation, study, data, information, and manpower is expended to justify the need for the program. Yet, no information is received when a program goes away, some individuals are curious as to why. • We discussed the role of data and how data influences all elements of program development, sustainability, and closure.

		<ul style="list-style-type: none"> In efforts to understand why programs go away as well as learning how to accomplish sought after solutions, understanding the significance of data is paramount. This was a very active discussion with most of the meeting attendees sharing.
